

I oppose an end to the agency's ban against in-flight cell phone use. Just yesterday, while returning from Las Vegas, a cell phone user continued to talk after several announcements requesting user to end conversations. Cell phone users have little respect for others and an end to the ban might lead to confrontations between those who wish to talk and those who don't want to hear their conversations. Flying is already stressful without adding another potential clash.